DECISIONS. . . .

It is difficult, if not impossible to be hypocritical and decisive.

Once a decision is properly made, the alternatives are behind you. New ones await.

The one element which is universally respected, but hardly universal is the courage to decide. And among decision makers, this quality is universal. And people are unable to decide unless they know themselves well. Otherwise, their decisions become a trail of pointless inconsistencies or responses which fail of the role of a decision. . .to initiate. The element of the unpredictable always enters, but that margin can be anticipated to narrow its effect, though it is not eliminated.

Real need for courage arises. Once the decision is acted upon, the element of the unknown may pop up. And it may take more than the decision deserves to see it through. This is a tough alternative: that you may not have the stuff to see it through.

Leadership requires decisiveness. It requires anticipation of the best and the worst, and the probability of settling for something between.

Another element leadership requires is insight enough to save face for the other fellow, regardless. This is consideration that makes the Oriental so different from the Occidental. We think life is a game to be played, to win or lose. The Oriental sees life as something to be savored, to be experienced, to be contemplated. The European, our older cousin, thinks of life as something to be gotten through.

A modern decision-making process involves consideration of not only our motivation and native background, but the elements of the world which once were safely dispelled by time and distance.

We are separate no longer. And we are changing.

Through history and drama you recall phrases about decisions: "looking down into my open (political) grave." . . ."I have but one life to give to my coun try". . ."ask not what your country can do for you, but ask what you do for your country". . ."I am I, Don Quixote". . . Yes, even madness.

Like the man who lives to describe his life flashing before him in a moment of apparent death, the decision maker sees the worst of it and hopes for the best of it. He has come to know himself well enough to dare ask, to dare stand in confidence to do that thing. Ranks of hypocrites are reduced by one.

His action may be cursed; but his courage is paramount and is praised, by enemy, by friend. And among the living, there is no finer tribute.

COUNCIL HEARS HOUSING PLANS

City council in regular session Tuesday evening heard plans for a new 8-house subdivision to be built in the city and heard an offer to join the recently organized Rural Regional Housing Authority.

Also on the agenda were spokesmen for the Folk Fete requesting several improvements to the city park and a report on urban renewal progress.

The subdivision plan was presented by Joe Tomerlin, builder, and Wayne Weiser. Plans call for eight homes to be built in a location west of Cameron Junior High.

Tomerlin told councilmen the building would be done on a Farmers Home Administration commitment plan.

Council approved the subdivision plan.

Miss Mildred Thornton and Mrs. Perry Holder, Folk Fete co-chairmen, asked the council for action on several items to increase comfort during the June fete.

They included a night watchman for the park, steps for the incline near the bandstand, more bridges across the gully, repair of playground and table equipment, spraying for ants on the library lawn and park, and temporary restrooms.

Council agreed to take care of the requests.

Narvie Caperton, Milam County director for the Rural Housing Authority, presented authority plans and said the authority could replace substandard housing in cities only if the council approved.

After discussion the proposition was turned down, councilmen agreeing that FHA housing and perhaps an urban renewal project for blighted areas would help alleviate the city's housing problems and be better from a tax standpoint.

A. W. McCullin, UR executive director, reported to the council on progress of the city's project. McCullin said the project is moving into its execution phase. He emphasized that the city's building code should be strictly enforced otherwise it would present one of the biggest problems when inspection time came.

In other business, councilmen approved adoption of rules governing officers in the police department, discussed status of street paving, and paid routine bills.

MARCIA BARKEMEYER

Marcia Wins State Title

By Alan Barkemeyer

Marcia Barkemeyer became the first student in Buckholts High School history to win a State title last Friday as she won the Class B State Spelling Championship held at the University of Texas at Austin.

Miss Barkemeyer captured the 61st Annual University Interscholastic League title by defeating last year's champion, Carla Ridgeway of Mobeetie, in a 60 word tie-breaking runoff.

It marked the first time that a Buckholts student had ever won a State Championship of any kind. It was also Marcia's third consecutive trip to the State spelling meet and it ended two years of frustration for the Buckholts junior. She placed fourth both in 1969 and 1970.

The 60 word spelloff was held after three participants had tied for first place with scores of 98. Marcia misspelled "accrual" and "asthenia" in the regular 120-word contest and was tied with Miss Ridgeway and Larry Hooper of Bronte after the regular competition had ended

The runoff was held an hour later and the three students were given 60 words which were not included on the official U.I.L. list. Marcia missed only 9 and easily won the crown. Miss Ridgeway was a distant second and Hooper finished 3rd.

Janice Beseda of Penelope, a third place finisher a year ago, and Robert Hundt of Lindsay, finished 4th and 5th respectively.

Miss Barkemeyer was awarded a gold medal, a silver plaque for the school, and three framed replicas of the United States Constitution, Declaration of Independence, and Bill of Rights, also to be presented to the school. Marcia is also now eligible to apply for numerous scholarships awarded to State contest participants of U.I.L. events.

Marcia started her climb to the top early in April when she won the District 15B Spelling title at a meet held at Baylor University in Waco. She won second at the Region II meet at Tarleton State College at Stephenville a week later. She was beaten by Robert Hundt of Lindsay in that contest, but continued to state, as both 1st and 2nd place Regional finalists are allowed to do.

In her three years of high school spelling competition, Marcia has finished first at District twice and second once, first at Regional once and second twice, and has rolled to two 4th place finishes at State and one State Championship.

May Is Transfer Month At School

May is "transfer month" for any students who want to transfer from their present school district into the Cameron school district.

Supt. D. R. Dodson said forms for transferring are available at his office at Ben Milam School. Anyone wishing to transfer must do it this month. Office hours are from 8 until 4.

Cen - Texans 'Speak Out'

Central Texans had a chance to "speak out" via a questionnaire submitted by State Rep. Dan Kubiak. He released results of the tabulations this week.

Rep. Kubiak said the response was "tremendous" to the questionnaire printed in newspapers in District 27 during mid-March. Readers were invited to fill out the questionnaire and mail it to Kubiak's office.

Two-thirds of those questioned favored letting 18 - year - olds have the vote, while two-thirds said they would not vote for the State officials involved in the SEC stock insurance scandal.

Little sympathy was shown for students engaged in disruptive activities: 97 percent support the "expulsion from our educational systems."

Also turned down were the state income tax by 77 percent; legalized abortion by 74 percent, and freezing appropriations for Farm-Market roads, 86 percent.

Ninety-one percent favored additional ~~expendit~~ expenditure for all phases of crime prevention and prosecution; and for criminal rehabilitation programs, 88 percent.

Eighty-two percent favored additional vocational - technical programs at the high school level. Opinion was divided on the question, do you believe your local schools now offer an excellent over-all education: 43 percent said yes, and 41 percent said no.

Seventy-one percent favored abolishing Daylight Saving time, 23 percent did not.

Sixty-eight percent favored imposing a state profits tax on corporations as a means of obtaining additional revenue.

Another close one was favoring taxing more items under the sales tax instead of increasing the rate of presently taxed items: 43 percent said yes, 44 percent said no. Fifty-three percent favored increasing the sales tax as a means of obtaining additional state revenue, while 40 percent said no.

Sixty percent did not believe Texas industry carries its fair share of taxes, but 12 percent did. No opinion was held by 20 percent.

Fifty-five percent favored abolishing the state death penalty -- 34 percent said no. The teacher pay raise bill enacted by the last legislature was favored by 52 percent while 28 percent cast negative votes.

Sixty-seven percent favored registering by party but 20 percent didn't. More emphasis should be placed on vocational training and technical training, according to 62 percent.

Forty-three percent believes local schools now offer an excellent over-all education, but 41 percent doesn't while 16 percent had no opinion.

Sixty-nine percent favored an expenditure to advertise the "Small Town" image to attract industry. On the question of changing the primary election date, 61 percent favored it, 17 percent did not, and 22 percent had no opinion.

Liquor by the drink was turned down by 69 percent, favored by 17 percent. A state income tax was favored by only 6 percent while 77 percent said no.

And 50 percent, or ha[illegible] do not believe an increase in tuition at state colleges and universities is a desirable way to help pay higher education costs, while 37 percent favored the increase.

PTA To Have Special Program

The Cameron Parent Teacher Association will meet for the regular monthly meeting at 7:30 Thursday night (tonight) at Ben Milam cafeteria.

The program will be "Facilities for Learning" and will be presented by Alice Hughes, homemaking department; Bob Carter, vocational agriculture; and Herbert Sims, industrial arts department.

The programs will be presented in the respective buildings.

"These departments are an asset to our school and we should all come to see them," said Mrs. Louis Elley, PTA president.

New officers will be installed at the business meeting. All parents, teachers, and interested persons are invited to attend.

Oklahoma Family Seeks Lost Dog

An Oklahoma couple is seeking the whereabouts of their lost family pet, an eight year old Boston terrier.

The dog was lost during the Easter weekend, between Cameron and Victoria, as the family was on its way to Corpus Christi.

Mrs. Warren L. Smith, owner of the dog, said it may have left the car while they were eating at the Ponderosa Restaurant. They did not miss the dog until they stopped for gas at Victoria. She said it may have headed north on US 77.

Mrs. Smith said the dog was the pet of a seven-year-old retarded boy, "and it is heart breaking when he asks for Sissy," she wrote in a letter to The Herald.

The Smiths asked if possibly the highway patrol, police, or road workers had seen the dog, dead or alive. "It is the not knowing which is so hard," she wrote.

The dog was black and white, and wearing a collar with the Smith's phone number on it.

Anyone having information is asked to contact Dr. and Mrs. Warren L. Smith, 3717 South Canton, Tulsa, Okla. 74135. Mrs. Smith asked that they be called collect if the dog is found.

Recognition Day To Mark Firemen's 81 Years

Eighty-one years of service is a long time for any organization and the Cameron Volunteer Firemen can look back proudly on their heritage.

Saturday will be Fire Service Recognition Day, and the Cameron volunteers will host an open house at the Fire Station from 2 until 5 p.m. The Ladies Auxiliary will serve refreshments.

Highlight of the afternoon will be pumper races, with the ladies competing against the men at 3 p.m.

The ladies auxiliary is a new addition to the local fire department, being organized October 13, 1970. Present membership totals 19, with 12 members active.

Officers are Jo Ann Thompson, president; Pearlie Krenek, vice president; Judy Simpkins, secretary; Kathleen Lewis, treasurer; and Jean Krenek, reporter.

The ladies pumper racing team includes Agnes Bruedigan, Mary Sue Thompson, Pearlie Krenek, Teresa Schulz, Gladys Dohnalik, and Judy Simpkins, team captain.

Present members of Cameron Volunteer Fire Department are J. C. Andres, Eugene Angell, Carl C. Black (chief), Bill Burns, Leslie Bruedigan, Monroe Bruedigan, Gary Biskup, R. K. Botts, Tommy Chamberlain, August Dohnalik, Alfred Dusek, Gene Hillman, Marvin Haag, Emil Horelica, Joe Humplik, Edwin Kohutek, Jimmy Krenek.

Also, Charles (Chuck) Krenek, Ed Laywell, Nathan Lewis, Clifford Marburger, Robert Michalka, Felix Matula, David Perkins, Lloyd Rider, Eugene Schattle, John A. Schmidt, Gary Simpkins, John D. Thompson, Jimmy Thompson, and Claude Burgess, driver.

EARLY DAYS

The early days of the Cameron volunteers are recorded in a history of the department compiled by the late John Eanes, one-time fire marshal and long time fireman.

The history dates the organization on May 13, 1890, when a group of Cameron citizens met and formed the volunteer fire department. It was probably a "bucket brigade," since water mains had not been laid.

From buckets the firemen went to hoses, pulled to the fire by a two wheel cart. The firemen drew the cart. In later years the firemen used these carts for racing teams in "reel races."

In 1914, according to Eanes' history, the city bought a horsedrawn fire wagon and two horses. The horses, Tom and Jerry, were kept in the rear of the station, built in 1895 on the same spot the present-day station occupies.

The first motorized fire truck was bought in the early 1900s, when a 1915 American LaFrance chain driven, solid tire, 500 gallon per minute model put Tom and Jerry out to pasture. August Horstmann was the first fire truck driver.

FAITHFUL SERVICE

The Cameron Fire Department has answered every call -- day or night -- without pay and sometimes without thanks, for over 80 years.

A list of all the fires, major and minor, would fill many pages, but some of

Cameron Folk Fete--Year II

Food--from "soul" to parmesan--will be part of the Cameron Folk Fete, which is sparking five television appearances among a host of pre-June 11-12 activity.

Typical foods of the ethnic Folk Fete groups will be in a recipe book on sale during the Fete. Some of the ethnic food booths may serve the stuff.

The ethnic music and dance groups, some already well known for appearances throughout Central and North Texas, will highlight the appearances on television stations in Waco, Austin, Temple and Bryan (2).

Each appearance will have narration with the groups, explaining background of Folk Fete and why it is being heralded by tourism experts as one of the future major attractions in Texas.

Other publications and periodicals will be telling the Folk Fete story, which is synomymous with the development of Milam County. But the recipes and the TV appearances are the first major additions to the pre-Folk Fete planning this year.

Last year, upward to 5,000 saw Folk Fete. Tens of thousands if not hundreds of thousands will see parts of it on television in the next six weeks. And Cameron well may wonder where we might take the Fete a third year out. Hopeful estimates of 10,000 this June are given.

This Folk Fete is for everyone -- the Pilgrimage of Homes, the parade, the singing and instrumental groups (some new this year), the dance groups, the booths, the arts and crafts -- the works is for Texans everywhere who easily can identify with some part of the program, who can enjoy the food, who can glimpse amateur and professional art and craft. Whatever it is, it is likely to be part of Cameron Folk Fete, Year II.

Wilson Confirms New Image...

The world is aware of the modern Texas of NASA space shots and advances in education, according to former British Prime Minister Harold Wilson.

Speaking before a joint session of the Texas Legislature, Wilson said the new Texas "is a new and live picture which the world now sees--different from those derived from the western films we saw in boyhood, or the exploits of the legendary oil barons."

Wilson lauded Texas on a visit to the Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs over the weekend. He saw the first class in the School of Public Affairs, similar to the Woodrow Wilson School at Princeton University and other public affairs graduate schools in the western world.

What this means to Texas is obvious. The smoke is clearing of the pioneering era of this state; and unfortunately, this image retained hold on non-Texan imagination for at least a generation longer than it was valid.

A former world leader has the experience to compare what he sees with the best of Europe, and Wilson says Texas is a new world, compared to the stereotyped image of our old.

Houston is possibly the most booming city in the western world at this time. And it is the home of the Manned Space Craft Center, part of the reason for the boom.

Not only in the eyes of Mr. Wilson, but in the eyes of most people in the world, Texas is indeed changing, if not changed. Mr. Wilson confirms what we see around us.

"Low Down" FROM THE Congressional Record

By JOE CRUMP

(A Column for Readers Who Haven't Time to Review the Congressional Record Daily)

TAX RETURN "GOOFS" SPURS LEGISLATION

SENATOR ABRAHAM RIBICOFF (Conn.) ". . .Americans have mailed their tax forms with a check attached or with the hope for a refund. Many have personally prepared their own returns, checked them over, signed them, and dropped them in the mail. An increasing number, however, have had a tax preparation service do the work for them to insure that the return was correct and to avoid dealing with the complexity of our tax laws. Unfortunately, many of these independently prepared returns will be erroneous. . .

"Given the same information, five firms in the Atlanta area came up with five different results. . .(One firm informed the taxpayer he was entitled to a refund of $652.04 from the federal government; at the other extreme, another service figured he OWED the government $141.99). . .

"In the last few years the tax preparation service industry has grown at a dramatic rate. The House Government Operations Subcommittee on Legal and Monetary Affairs, chaired by Congressman John Monagan, of Connecticut has found that 60 percent of the income returns filed are now prepared by third parties for a fee. An estimated 200,000 persons and firms now prepare tax returns. Franchises are being sold across the country and chain department stores and banks are setting up tax booths in every branch.

"The service is always performed by "experts" and is usually "computor fast and accurate."

"The industry has, however, been allowed to grow unregulated. There are no Federal laws, rules or regulations covering their practices of their employees. . .

"Therefore, I am introducing today the TAXPAYERS PROTECTION ACT (S. 1527) which will authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to set standards for persons other than lawyers and certified accountants, who are in the business of preparing Federal tax forms for others. The Secretary would develop an examination to test the preparers' knowledge and understanding of the tax laws.

"If properly developed, these regulations should not hamper the growth of the industry. The ultimate success of tax preparation firms depends on public confidence in their skills and judgement, and the Taxpayers Protection Act will help assure the public of reliable service. . ."

A GRASSROOTS COMMENT

It's cause for concern when five different tax service firms come up with five different answers using the same figures.

The Internal Revenue Service checks all income tax returns promptly for errors in mathematics. But it may be some time before the return is audited. It is then that the "experts" are separated from the experts. The Internal Revenue Service holds the taxpayer responsible for errors regardless of who prepared the tax return.--J.C.

Tax Bill Action Switches Back To House For Study

By Vern Sanford

--Tax bill action switched back to the House this week after Senate passage of a $662.3 million revenue measure.

Senate passed its version of the tax bill 22-9 after rejecting six separate attempts to insert a corporation profits levy by narrow (usually 16-15) margins and six other amendments. Only amendment of substance attached in floor debate was a half-cent-a-gallon increase in diesel fuel levy to make it the same as the gasoline tax.

Here is what the bill (HB 730) now calls for its estimated biennial yield:

* Increase sales tax rate from 3.25 to four per cent, $288.5 million.

* Increase motor vehicle sales tax to four percent and bring auto rentals under levy, $79.4 million.

* Raise corporation franchise tax from $3.25 per $1,000 to $4.50, $102.6 million over three year period.

* Increase cigarette tax three cents a pack to 18.5 cents, highest figure in the nation, with one cent dedicated to park development, $46.7 million.

* Raise the gasoline tax from five to seven cents a gallon, $102.1 million.

* Increase beer tax from $4.30 to $6 a barrel, $28.8 million.

* Increase diesel fuel tax one half cent, to seven cents a gallong, $4 million.

House Speaker Gus Mutscher took an early dim view of the gasoline tax in particular, and a conference committee was expected to adjust differences.

Stripped from the House bill were taxes on hotel rooms, stock transactions, jet fuel, admissions and entertainment and sand, gravel and shell. Senate also more than doubled the House version of the franchise tax.

COURTS SPEAK

State Supreme Court agreed to set a hearing on the issue of whether district attorneys can file a barrage of suits to prevent stores from using various devices to get around Texas' Sunday closing laws.

A Houston clinic can be sued along with a doctor-partner in it for alienation of affections, Supreme Court held in a split decision.

High Court, reversing an intermediate court, held that the Austin suburb of West Lake Hills is a legally - incorporated city, but its attempted annexation of territory to the north of its original boundaries is invalid.

Third Court of Civil Appeals held that six Texas A&M University employees cannot draw state salaries and serve on the College Station City Council at the same time.

Same Court reversed the state savings and loan commissioner's finding that a charter should be granted to a savings and loan concern in Pasadena.

A new trial of the disputed sale contract involving a Killeen radio station was ordered by the Third Court.

REQUESTS PARK FUNDS

Governor has urged federal authorities release more than $3.2 million in Bureau of Outdoor Recreation funds for 20 state and 34 local park-rec projects.

He accused the Republican administration of delaying funds "for partisan political reasons." Smith said the BOR is awaiting advice of federal solicitor and U.S. District Attorney Segal Wheatley of San Antonio before approving projects signed by Pearce Johnson, Parks and Wildlife Commission chairman as state liaison officer in parks matters.

Johnson blocked the use of $2.1 million in BOR funds released to the state for Mustang Island park purchase early this year with federal court action.

Largest of the grants being held up is $731,300 for the new McKinney Falls State Park.

Letters to the Editor

April 30, 1971

Dear Frank:

All of us are aware of the need for better methods of financing sewage treatment facilities by our cities and towns in Texas. Our population is growing, adding new burdens to sewage treatment plants which are not able to properly eliminate wastes in many areas, further polluting streams, rivers, lakes and land areas.

At present, each local community or city must bear 67% of the high cost of improved sewage treatment facilities. Amendment 4, to be voted May 18, would make $100 million in state bonds available to help cities with sewage treatment. By making low interest rate loans, which would reduce the city's primary outlay to only 20%, we could gain $200 million in federal funds to help the cities reduce their initial expense for additional or completely new sewage treatment facilities.

It's strange to me that our opponents say Amendment 4 is in some way connected with the "Texas Water Plan", which is not true. They object to the raising of the limit of bond interest to a ceiling of 6%. But this is absolutely necessary of Texas will not be able to sell its bonds at competitive rates, regardless of how many bonds we vote.

The fact is that passage of amendment 4 will reduce the local tax burden for sewage treatment. It will help bring back $200 million in federal tax money to help us solve sewage treatment problems. It will benefit our health and environment by cleaning up streams, rivers, lakes, and land areas now becoming dangerous. It will save water. There are many other reasons our state cannot afford to lose this election. I am enclosing some additional information to answer any questions you may have, and I am personally asking your help and your influence to get this very important amendment passed.

Remember, if your city does not now need this sewage treatment improvement, population growth and continued depreciation of present facilities will make this amendment 4 very attractive in the future, when you do need it.

Thank you for all the help you can give us. We think this issue is very important and we are concerned that several organizations have grossly misled the public in regard to Amendment #4.

Sincerely,
Preston Smith
Governor of Texas

April 30, 1971

Dear Mr. Luecke:

Would you believe $300 million? That's how much money in refunds was returned to a million and a half southern Texas taxpayers so far this year. But refund or no, we're grateful for the timely and accurate filing of the vast majority of all of the two and half million taxpayers in the Austin District who filed returns during the recent filing period.

And to you and your staff, who helped bring tax messges to these folks in your area, our appreciation for a great public service. We're especially thankful for your use of our Question and Answer Column materials.

Thank you so much for seeing us through another successful filing period.

Sincerely,
R. L. Phinney

OLD PHILOSOPHER

Dear editar:

Reports on tapping telephones, bugging offices, and other forms of eavesdropping have been showing up in every newspaper that turns up out here and I have given some thought to the situation.

As I understand it, some Congressmen are up in arms claiming their phones have been tapped and they want it stopped.

I have not listened in on any Congressional phone conversations but I have heard lots of Congressmen on television and sometimes it seems to me tapping their phones would be going to a lot of trouble for the returns you'd get.

While it is not considered phone-tapping, I have listened in on an 8-family party line and I can tell you right now there are far more interesting ways to spend your time. Unless you're interested in cake recipes and your neighbors' in-laws, it's hardly worth the trouble of lifting the hook off the receiver. I guess the worst job you could give an F.B.I. agent would be listening in on a party line eight hours at a stretch.

As for bugs, I understand you can stick one of those on a wall in a room and it'll pick up everything said and broadcast it to a receiver in a car a block away. I know a man who lives in an apartment building in a city and he says what he's looking for is a bug that'll blot out everything yelled in the adjoining apartments, and that goes for rock-playing phonegraphs and violin pupils.

Almost on the same subject, I knew a combination station agent and telegraph operator in a small town once who called up a woman and told her she had a telegram and since it was raining would it be all right for him just to read it to her.

"Don't you dare open my telegram!" she shouted.

I don't know whether the F.B.I. looked into this or not.

Yours faithfully,
J. A.

THE FAMILY LAWYER

Plan on Dying

Some years ago a clerk in a bookstore, unpacking a shipment of new books, found one on the subject of "estate planning." Thinking it must be about the landscaping of large homes, he placed it in the gardening section.

He would hardly make that mistake today. Estate planning has come into its own, used by thoughtful people everywhere to preserve assets during their lifetime and to pass them on wisely—and economically—at death.

One reason for the growth of estate planning is the growth of estates. Nowadays even the ordinary citizen is likely to have an estate of substance. It may well include not only a home and a savings account but also personal life insurance, group insurance, stocks, pension plan benefits, profit-sharing options, and social security rights.

Another reason is that estate planning has become far more sophisticated. Its techniques have gone well beyond the traditional "testamentary trust" for a rich old lady and "spendthrift trust" for a rich young man.

Unfortunately, there are pitfalls aplenty for the amateur planner. For example: many people think avoiding probate is the same as avoiding taxes. But the federal estate tax is based on the entire estate, whether it passes through probate or not.

Likewise, many people think life insurance is not taxable. But life insurance proceeds are included in determining a person's gross estate for federal estate tax purposes unless he has retained none of the incidents of ownership of that policy.

True, it may be sensible in certain circumstances to avoid probate. And it may be possible in certain circumstances to avoid taxes on life insurance. But clearly this is a field in which the layman needs expert help.

Fewer Farms—More Food

During the 1960s, production of farm goods in the U.S. rose 20 percent even though tillable acreage decreased 6 percent and number of farms decreased 26 percent. Output per man-hour on farms increased 82 percent. With less land and fewer farms, increased output has been made possible through greater agricultural production efficiencies — scientific control of diseases, pests, and weeds; better land and water management; genetic development of improved, high-quality foods; land fertilization; and faster growth of farm products.

That's why, through modern technology, one U.S. farmer today is able to provide food and fiber for 43 other people in this country and throughout the world.

Time To Control Tree Webworms

By J. D. Moore

Insect controls are more effective at a lower cost while insects are small and populations are low. Then too, more benefit is obtained if control steps are taken before extensive plant damage occurs.

Webworm control on peacan and shade trees is recommended now.

Webworms are the result of a white moth laying a large number of eggs on the leaves of pecan and shade trees. These eggs hatch into tiny worms in about 7 days which start feeding on the leaves.

As these small worms feed, they build a web which finally appears loosely woven and dirty. Quite a lot of damage is done throughout the next 3 or 4 months as these worms increase in size.

Control - Spray or dust trees with Toxaphene, Seven or other similar insecticides.

MAGNOLIA TREES

Many request have been received concerning the unsightly diseased leaves on Magnolia trees. Magnolia trees are evergreen and it is natural for the leaves to show an unhealthy condition after having been on the tree for a year.

Those with Magnolia trees are encouraged to use cultural practices such as fertilizing their tree with 2 lbs. of a balanced fertilizer per 1 inch diameter of the tree trunk. Be sure the tree gets enough water.

Gall Forming Insect - Galls on leaves of trees will begin to show the latter part of May. To prevent having this problem, spray your pecan and shade trees with Sevin, Malathion, Toxaphene, DDT, etc., to control the small wasp-like insects which are active now.

Disyston For Aphids - Disyston for aphid control should be applied now for the systemic control of aphids which cause "honeydew" later on in the summer. Recommendations are available from the county agents office.

Fertilized Pastures Are Less Affected By Drouth

Pastures receiving adequate plant food are able to withstand dry weather better, says Neal Pratt, Extension agronomist, Texas A&M University.

Recent dry weather in much of Texas has shown the failure of adequate pasture fertilization, he adds.

Pastures receiving adequate plant food can produce three times as much grazing -- and more -- as pastures not receiving plant food, notes Pratt. Even during dry weather this difference can still be observed in most Texas pastures.

Pastures receiving adequate plant food have root systems which grow to a greater depth in the soil. This enables plants to obtain moisture and creates healthier plants. The additional root system helps the soil accumulate and store the rainfall which occurs, thereby conserving soil and water resources.

Pasture plants receiving adequate plant food have greater leaf area, but less evaporation than plants not receiving adequate plant food, continues the agronomist.

Although the benefit of pasture fertilization may not be as great in dry weather as in years with normal rainfall, the agronomist advises that fertilization during drouth can still be expected to return dividends.

Many result demonstrations during recent years have shown the advantages of using adequate plant food during periods of low rainfall.

Because April, May and June usually are the most favorable months for growing spring and summer grazing, the agronomist urges livestock producers to be sure adequate fertilizer is available to utilize moisture when received.

Many result demonstrations throughout the state have produced 1 ton or more of grazing from 2 inches of summer rainfall, Pratt said.

Beef, Swine Exports Up

AUSTIN

Texas livestock producers continue to set the pace in exports of U.S. breeding stock to foreign countries.

Texas Agriculture Commissioner John C. White has released statistics showing a dramatic increase in the number of breeding swine and beef cattle exported from Texas during the first quarter of 1971, as compared to the totals for the first three months of last year.

Commissioner White says swine exports during January, February and March of this year numbered 6,575 head, while the total for the same period last year was 906.

White pointed out that even though swine exports increased during the second half of 1970, the figures for the first part of 1971 represent a 240% increase over the previous year on an annual basis.

The increase is particularly significant because Texas already leads the nation in exports of breeding swine, with a margin of seven to one over the second ranking state.

The increase in beef cattle exports during the first quarter of 1971 represents a 140% growth over the 1970 totals on an annual basis. The first quarter figures for 1971 are 2,214 head compared to 1,569 head last year.

Commissioner White says Mexico continues to be the best market for export sales of both swine and beef cattle, although shipments are made to some 20 foreign countries.

Texas Meat Inspection Is Now Equal To Federal

The U.S. Department of Agriculture last week certified the Texas meat inspection program equal to the federal one, making the state responsible for inspecting its own intrastate meat slaughtering and processing plants.

The certification will affect 582 plants in the state under laws of the Texas legislature and in agreement with the 1967 Wholesome Meat Act.

The 1967 law required all state plants to reach the federal requirements by December 1970 to retain their own state inspection. Surveys were made in the state by federal meat inspection officials and Texas didn't meet the federal standards.

Notice was then given in early February that federal inspectors would assume all inspection in the state's plants.

Later reviews indicated that Texas was enforcing inspection requirements at least equal to federal ones.

Texas meat inspection officials, directed by Dr. A. B. Rich, did an amazing job in bringing Texas standards up to federal levels according to Woodrow W. Bailey, Extension livestock and meats specialist.

Bailey added that Texas was far behind some of the other states in meat inspection when the Wholesome Meat Act was passed.

He also noted that state inspection officials had to hire and train about 600 new inspectors in less than one year.

Bailey explained that Texas meat inspectors will try to continue improving all phases of inspection and there will be no relaxation in requirements since Texas standards have been certified as equal to federal.

Half of the state's budget for meat inspection will come from matching federal funds, according to officials in the USDA's Consumer and Marketing Service.

West Virginia's meat inspection program was also certified equal to federal last week, bringing to 44 the number of states which have achieved "equal to" meat inspection status, Bailey noted.

Food Costs Can Be Cut Says Expert

Are you finding it harder each time you grocery shop to make a given amount of money go the same distance?

Prices of practically all goods and services, including foods, have increased, but not as fast as incomes, reports Mrs. Gwendolyne Clyatt, Extension consumer marketing specialist. Still a major concern of homemakers is how to save on food expenditures.

Remember several factors influence food prices, she says. Along with the general national economic climate, these include business costs, weather, and future market expectations.

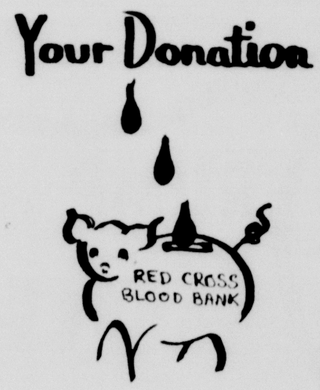
Mrs. Clyatt makes several suggestions to help cut food costs.

First, figure how much you presently spend for food. Some record-keeping may be necessary for a few months, so you will know just how much you are spending.

Then determine why you are spending what you are. Several factors affect family food spending: inflation, age of family members, frequency of entertaining, nutritional requirements, family size, types of food purchased, planning preparation skills, and family likes and dislikes.

To help cut the food budget, put some tools to work---a sharp pencil and some paper, the weekly newspaper food ads, a favorite cookbook, and generous amounts of desire, says Mrs. Clyatt.

If you are cost conscious and want to improve your buying skills, you will make full use of label information, advertising, store displays and even friends' comments.



SCS NEWS

What's better, faster, cheaper -- and reduces erosion up to 95 percent?

It's mulch tillage, says Clyde W. Graham, state conservationist for the Soil Conservation Service in Temple. Sometimes called minimum tillage or no-till, mulch tillage is a new system of farming where residues from a previous crop are left on or near the surface throughout the cropping year.

Graham says the specific advantages are:

--less labor. Plowing and planting trips across the field are reduced.

--lower production costs. Many farmers report savings of $8 to $14 an acre.

--more moisture conservation.

--less soil erosion.

--possiblity of double cropping in some areas.

--protection of seedlings from wind damage.

--more food and cover for wildlife.

"Farmers and researchers report that yields of mulch-tilled fields," Graham says. "However, the system may lower soil temperatures, delaying seed germination in the spring. But moisture conserved by the mulch usually offsets this delay later in the growing season. The system does not, of course, eliminate the need for other good farming practices, such as disease or insect control."

Here's how mulch tillage differs from conventional farming.

In one trip across a field, a farmer simultaneously prepares a seedbed, plants his seed, applies fertilizer, and adds herbicides for weed control while disturbing only a small portion of the soil surface.

In conventional methods, 6 to 10 trips are often required to do the same job, and almost all surface soil is disturbed on each trip. And each soil disturbance destroys residue that might have been left on the surface for soil protection.

"Since it costs at least $1 a mile to pull a plow, it pays to hold trips across a field to a minimum," Graham points out. "With mulch tillage, chemicals are used to control unwanted vegetation instead of cultivators."

But the big factor in Texas is erosion control, Graham emphasized. On sandy or loamy soils in the western half of the state, mulch tillage is especially effective in stopping wind erosion. In fact, it is one of the most critically needed cropland conservation measures in Texas. And it is just as effective in preventing water erosion on all kinds of soil.

USDA researchers report that in one field test, switching to mulch tillage from conventional methods reduced soil losses by a whopping 95% -- from 7.8 tons per acre to .03 tons per acre.

Soil Conservation Service personnel in Texas made a concentrated effort to get mulch tillage trials started across the state during 1969 and 1970. Cooperators with soil and water conservation districts have used the system on several kinds of crops on varying conditions. Results generally have been excellent and the practice is expected to spread rapidly.

Graham said special farm equipment now on the market and new techniques for putting fertilizer in the ground have helped make the measure practical. He also credits the perfection of new herbicides which take the place of cultivation in controlling and preventing weeds with speeding up acceptance of the practice.

Older farm equipment can be adapted to mulch tillage. Or farmers may buy specially designed planters that cut through stubble-covered fields with minimum disturbance while preparing narrow, easy-to-close planting slits in the soil. Fertilizer can be knifed in with the seed or scattered on the surface.

Graham said the Soil Conservation Service has a new leaflet which explains how much and what kind of crop residue is most desirable for erosion control, and how to estimate the amount of residues from crop yields. While the publication talks mostly about corn, soybeans and small grain, the principles also apply to grain sorghum and other crops.

Single copies of "Mulch Tillage in Modern Farming," Leaflet No. 554 are available free from SCS offices.

Egypt's Schools 'Beyond Repair'

By John Chadwick
Reuter Correspondent

CAIRO

Egypt's schools are bulging with students, many unable to find themselves a desk, yet government ministries are full of graduates with nothing to do but pick up their pay envelopes.

The main problem is money. Even graduate teachers can earn only 44 dollars a month, and non-graduates about 28.80 dollars.

The pipe - smoking ministry employees, who set around with hardly a thing to do, can pick up 72 dollars a month.

But in the farming villages of the delta the pupils sometimes do not show up at all because they are needed to pick the cotton or harvest the rice.

Egypt's school system -- theoretically based on the principle of universal education -- is "beyond repair." Says Prime Minister Dr. Mahmoud Fawzy. He is sending out experts to other countries to find remedies.

Overcrowded classrooms, where no student gets more than one minute of the teacher's time a day, dull text-books, inadequate teacher training -- and the bakshefsh system, which means that those with money get the best tuition -- have all come under fire.

The Soviet Union, Egypt's major ally, source of arms and industrial aid, quickly offered to put its entire educational system at Egypt's disposal.

The Egyptians politely thanked their communist allies but said they would devise their own system according to Egypt's special traditions and social system.

Delegates to a recent Cairo conference on education agreed with the prime minister that Egypt must get "into the space age" and overhaul its present system completely.

The first startling disclosure at conference was that the majority of teachers in government schools were not qualified for the job.

With the population exploding at the rate of over a million people a year there are just not enough schools. According to the recent government figures, Egypt has five million children of school age.

This means 60 children often sit crammed into one classroom, with broken down desks and few teaching aids, and in most primary schools, double sessions.

Delegates also complained about text books. These, they said, had every feature calculated to make them unattractive to the young -- bad paper, poor printing and the dullest presentation of material.

At the other end of the academic process, graduates are pouring out of universities and technical institutes with paper degrees but no jobs to go to.

The problem of surplus graduates is becoming more acute every year. Until recently many of them were sitting a year or more at home trying to get a job. Eventually the government created positions at a cost of 14 million dollars a year.

Nationally, this created new problems. Thousands of staff sit aimlessly around in government offices and banks, with virtually nothing to do but draw their salaries.

Gun Club To Open Skeet Range

The Cameron Gun Club will hold the grand opening of its skeet range on Saturday, May 8, according to Jimmy Bledsoe, club president.

Shotgun enthusiasts among the public are invited to come out and try their hand at skeet shooting. From 3 until 7 p.m. visitors may shoot for $1 per round (25 targets), which is what club members usually pay.

Members will be on hand to operate the machinery and shotgun shells will be available at the range for those who don't keep the light-load shells on their gun shelf.

The range is located on Farm Road 486 about three miles south of Pettibone.

A league is about three miles.

for and about WOMEN

Fellowship Day Focus 'Family In A New Era'

'Focus on the Family in a New Era' is the theme for the Church Women United May Fellowship Day luncheon Friday, May 7, at 12 noon at the First Presbyterian Church, Cameron.

"All women in Cameron are invited to bring a covered dish and join Church Women United in celebrating the annual May Fellowship Day," Mrs. D. R. Dodson, Church Women United president, said.

The informal discussion program will include participants from each of the 13 member churches. Emphasis discussions will be 'The Changing Family and Trends' presented by Mrs. Don Humble; 'What Youth Expects of Family' presented by Kathryn Kahler; Family and Church Women United Goals' presented by Mrs. D. R. Dodson.

Mrs. Nelson Green is program leader and Mrs. John Rosson is program chairman.

Mrs. Dodson pointed out that the echo of many voices will be heard in at least 2,300 communities across the nation as Protestant, Roman Catholic and Orthodox women explore the implications of this year's May Fellowship theme.

Mrs. Dodson said that some will react to the theme of Family in a New Era as business as usual; some will find it revolutionary and unsettling.

"Some women are already catching a sense of break through to new and perhaps more creative patterns of living in chaotic times," she said. "The initial decision of Church Women is whether to remain static or take initiative in determining what kind of new life awaits and contribute to its design."

The four phases of life will be included in discussion, using the life of Christ for leadership. Readers will open discussion sections on 'Growing Family,' 'Lost Parents, 'Extending the Family,' and 'Remembering Aged.'

'Grocer' Dates To 14th Century

Pepper and spice trading in 14th century England gave us our modern word "grocer", reports Mrs. Gwendolyne Clyatt, Extension specialist in consumer marketing.

After peppercorns made the 4000-mile trip from the mysterious East to London, they were bought and sold by the Guild of Pepperers by the gross, similar to present day wholesale methods, she says.

Peddlers purchased pepper from the "Grossers", and in turn, sold to housewives at country-wide fairs honoring various saints.

In the mid 14th century, the Guild of Pepperers formed the Worshipful Company of Grocers, in order to increase love and unity among the pepperers as well as creating binding rules for members.

According to Mrs. Clyatt, one of the rules read: "All merchandise shall be weighed fairly so that the weigher shall remove his hands therefrom."

About the handiest thing any hunter can have is a gun with a clip magazine.

It took a long time for clip magazines to come into the picture on big caliber rifles. But most of the companies now are making them. This is particularly true of the automatic as well as some lever-actions and pumps.

Savage produced a rifle for clip magazines for years, and today most of its best models have clip magazines.

Reason behind this feature is very simple. It permits the easy carrying of the extra loads. This means you have a quick refill if you should try at some running animal. It also permits the use of different bullet weights, a worthwhile advantage in some hunting areas.

For instance, if you are shooting across a wide canyon, you may feel a 150 or 180 grain bullet is best. But if you are facing a big bear or expecting a moose, then you may want to go up to 200 grains. This, in the event you are using some of the larger calibers. Quick available power often is invaluable.

Although some of the manufacturers producing bolt action shotguns equipped them with box magazines, it has only been within the last dozen years that they have been available on the general run of sporting rifles. Now Winchester, Remington, Savage and others are using box magazines on some of their guns.

They recognized the safety feature as well as the convenience and simplicity accomplished through the speed of loading and reloading.

Safety certainly is a highly important feature be you walking, riding or relaxing. One thing for sure, no loaded gun should be carried in an automobile. It is dangerous to even have cartridges in the magazine when driving. But with the detachable clip the bullets can be slipped out of the action, pocketed and still be ready for immediate use . . . when you get out of the car.

That handy clip eliminates the piecemeal ejection of cartridges when the hunt is over. You merely detach the magazine, clear the chamber and that's all there is to it. Reloading takes only seconds.

These clip-detachable magazines now are available in most highpower calibers up to and including .30-06. They also can be had in your choice of auto, pump, lever or bolt. All the manufacturers do not produce clip loading bolt actions, but enough do to offer you a choice of the guns and caliber you desire.

So, when you get in the market for a new high-powered rifle, take a good look at the models with the detachable clip magazines. They usually cost a dollar or two more, but they are worth it in convenience and safety.

Gov. Smith Seeks Aid For State Industrial Programs

AUSTIN

Gov. Preston Smith has endorsed a series of legislative proposals which would aid Texas industrial development programs in both rural and metropolitan areas.

Gov. Smith told business and legislative leaders at a Texas Industrial Commission gathering that he favored creation of a Rural Industrial Development Finance Authority to provide direct loans to aid non-profit foundations in attracting industry to rural Texas. The authority would operate as an arm of the Commission in aiding some 230 such foundations.

"Today, 49 states, all but Texas, offer some type of industrial financing incentive to aid their communities," Gov. Smith said.

Legislation to allow banks and other financial institutions to pool funds in business development corporations for financing development projects and a bill allowing cities to issue tax-exempt bonds to finance local programs for attracting industry were also endorsed by the Governor.

In recent months, Texas lost no less than 18 industries with a potential employment of 6,500 because of community inability to provide competitive financing, Gov. Smith said.

"I urge the passage of each of these proposals," he said. "And I am confident that no other immediate action would be a better step toward achieving balanced growth in our Texas economy."

Gov. Smith made the remarks at a Texas Industrial Commission luncheon honoring three outgoing members.

Pulling Skier Takes Skill

Pulling a water skier involves more than pointing a boat in the right direction and giving it the gas, according to George Cook, director of Water Safety Services for the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

"Poor driving not only takes a lot of the fun out of water skiing, but it creates a hazard as well," said Cook.

First of all, the boat should be properly equipped, according to Cook. "Every boat that pulls a skier should be fitted with a large, rearview mirror and a hand throttle," he said. The mirror lets the driver keep an eye on the skier without taking his eyes off the water ahead, and the hand throttle permits smooth, quick starts and smooth going in rough water.

Cook said he did not recommend a foot throttle for boats pulling skiers. In choppy water the driver's foot bounces on the pedal, causing the boat to jerk and probably causing the skier to fall.

Even with the rearview mirror, an observer needs to be in the boat to watch the skier and relay signals to the driver.

When starting, the driver should keep the towline just taut enough to let the skier get his balance. When the skier shouts "hit it," the driver accelerates in a way to pull the skier to a smooth, quick get-up.

When the skier falls, the driver should slow immediately and turn back toward the skier. The driver and the observer watch for the skier to clasp his hands over his head to signal that he is "OK."

As the driver approaches the skier he should signal other boats that there is a skier down in the area by raising his arm above his head.

A skier in the water should be approached from downwind so the boat can't drift into the skier. If the boat comes too close, the driver should shut off the engine. Passing at a safe distance, the boat should head away slowly, trailing the towline so the skier can easily grasp it as it passes.

A boat driver should remember he is the skier's eyes. He must keep the skier clear of shallow water and hidden obstacles, keeping him out of the path of other boats and skiers.

A boat driver can judge landings well enough to allow the skier to glide only a few feet to shallow water once he drops the rope.

Kubiak's Legislative Reports

Rep. Dan Kubiak said he and many others in the House oppose "the magnitude of the appropriations bill and therefore oppose any increase in taxes until all non - essential spending is removed from the 19 2-73 tax measure."

He cited items such as $1 million for the LBJ State Park, $1 million for the Spindletop State Park, and other "non-essential spending."

Turning to insurance, Rep. Kubiak said SB 10 is still tied down in the insurance subcommittee. This is the No-Fault Insurance plan.

"In recent communication with the State of Massachusetts here in our office, I find that claim costs have been reduced 36 percent," he said.

The governor of Massachusetts stated that claim costs for 1971 may be 71.5 percent lower than 1969 and 69 percent lower than the first six months in 1970.

In checking with the Insurance Department, Rep. Kubiak said approximately 32 percent of the policy holders have cancelled their renewals on auto insurance.

The companies should be placed on a competitive basis for standard policies, Kubiak said.

He noted another "loan shark" proposal in the House and Senate, which would raise the interest ceiling on loans for new cars, furniture, etc.

"The bill, in essence," he said, "has unrealistic increases located throughout. I suggest that each of you who are opposed to this measure write Speaker Gus Mutscher and Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes and voice your opposition."

Neutralize Skunk Odor With Juice

The skunk is living proof that beauty is only skin deep.

Underneath all those fine stripes is a stink bomb just waiting for a chance to go off. And when it does, the victim is likely to have a social situation even worse than that poor television commercial snook with the dandruff.

Fortunately, according to Texas Park and Wildlife Department officials, an encounter with a skunk doesn't have to make one an outcast for life.

The skunk odor can be neutralized with a sponge bath of tomato juice.

Using the same method on clothes won't make them whiter than white, but it will rid the clothes of the offensive smell.

Another household item, toothpaste, will help get the fish smell off an outdoorsman's hands.

Lions Host Ladies Night

Kirkham, who spoke on Lionism, was introduced by Jim Camp.

About 40 Lions Club members and their wives attended the annual dinner.

Ibo Soothsayer Predicts Winners

By Godwin Ironkwe
Reuter Correspondent

ENUGU, Nigeria

Amazingly accurate forecasts by an Ibo soothsayer have thrown soccer pools companies here into a turmoil as more and more people win big money prizes on the basis of his predictions.

Some are now asking whether the soothsayer, 41 - year - old school - teacher Ubani O. Ubani, is really a genius or just a plain opportunist. Others are selling their meager property to raise betting stakes.

At present only Ubani really knows what he is. And he has gone into hiding as a storm of inquiry blows around East Central State, home of the Ibo tribe, improversihed by Nigeria's 37-month - long civil war.

But from his hide-out he did tell a reporter: "I do not guide myself. I shall carry out their directive."

He did not say who "their" was and seemed to imply some kind of spritual power.

Either way he has brought a financial boost to thousands and a major headache to the soccer pools companies.

The sudden rise to fame of Ubani, who gave up schoolteaching to become a pools' agent, began only in March when he forecast correctly five drawn matches for a fixed-odds bet on the pools coupons on which people place their bets.

He placed the forecast for all to see on a notice board in front of his one-room apartment office in a city suburb.

At this stage only a few people used the forecast to stake their bets. But they won big dividends.

For two more weeks running, Ubani's forecasts were stunningly accurate and the news spread quickly round the state.

People sold their clothes, bicycles, cars and anything handy to raise money for a stake in the "magic forecast."

For the fourth week running his forecast was right on target and pools experts said that nearly 1.3 million dollars was won, creating financial difficulties for the smaller pools companies.

Some reportedly found the winnings higher than their share capital and companies announced they were withholding payments on the grounds of possible "irregulatirities."

A potentially explosive crisis loomed and anti-riot police were brought into Enugu to disperse angry mobs trying to attack pools offices. Most betting houses were given guards.

Police, concerned at the mounting tension, appealed for law and order and summoned representatives of both the pools companies and the punters for talks to resolve the dispute.

Meanwhile, the companies found themselves facing a boycott from punters, many of them reduced to poverty because of their heavy investment in voided coupons.

At the height of the crisis, Ubani disappeared from his home and is still in hiding, visited only by relations and close friends.

From the hideout, Ubani, who says he never bets himself, said, "I am set to provide funds to rehabilitate the Ibos".

TO THINK ABOUT

If all the carbon dioxide on Earth that is locked in calcium carbonate, such as in sea shells, were released, our planet's atmosphere would be as thickly poisonous as the atmosphere on Venus, National Geographic reports.

Illegal Fishing Blinds Quartet To Warden's Car

LIBERTY

Love is blind. And so, apparently, is the love for illegal fishing.

Game Management Officer Herb Koen of Liberty was surprised when four men waded into the Trinity River and started fishing with an illegal "telephone" device after parking their cars on either side of his plainly marked Texas Parks and Wildlife Department car.

In what may be the easiest arrest in history for that offense, Koen watched from his car for a few minutes and then apprehended the four with their equipment and four catfish they had stunned with it.

Personal Income Tax Is Next, Says Sen. Murray Watson

Texas is just a step or two away from levying both a corporate profits tax and a personal income tax, Sen. Murray Watson stated in his April 30 newsletter.

He cited the Senate passage of the largest tax bill in the State's history.

He said the Legislature would be back in session in 1972 to appropriate money for welfare payments in the second year of the biennium since the appropriation bills do not include this money.

"At this point in time," Watson continued, "will come approval of the state's first tax levy on corporations' profits. The next step -- probably in the 63rd session in 1973 -- will be passage of a personal income tax."

Watson said he will vote against increasing appropriations and tax bills "when the people of my District cease demanding more services from the State."

This is just a picture of your State Farm family insurance man.

You should see him in person.

about
My MOTHER
Most all other things come by twos, threes, or even by dozens. See the roses, the stars, the sunsets.
Ah, there's brothers and sisters, too, and uncles and aunts and cousins a plenty. But in all the whole big world there's just one mother. There's much more about my mother and good it all must be. In fact she's as good as goodness is, and that's enough for me. Her words are kind, her faith is strong, and her hope as high as the highest tree. You can see from here that she is a dear, — she means everything to me. Not one single emotion comes nearer the divine than my mother's love for me. She is the soaring cloud of radiant rapture that lifts me to new attempts and the strength I need to see me through. I'm taking my mother to church this Mother's Day --- what about you???
You In The Church The Church In You — form a combination for good. Every man, woman and child needs the influence of the church. So, come let us go into the house of the Lord. Let us support her program of service to humanity, be a faithful worker, a daily bible reader and attend services regularly.

FINAL TRIBUTE - Frank Richter Sr., a fireman with the Cameron Volunteer Fire Department for 45 years was paid a final tribute in August, 1964 when his body was transported to St. Monica's Catholic Church and then to the cemetery in the fire truck he had used through the years. Mr. Richter had an outstanding record with the fire department and was chief firetruck driver for 42 years. Pallbearers were members of the Volunteer Fire Department. They rode the sides of the fire truck as they had to many fires with Richter as driver.

the fires are recalled because of their size, or the tragedy associated with them. Some of the calls were not to fires, but to aid in searching for drowning victims in river or tank.

Present equipment includes an emergency truck unit with resuscitator, stretchers, first aid equipment, emergency lights and other vital accessories. The department also has an outboard motor boat for rescue work on rivers and lakes in the county.

No story about the volunteers would be complete without some mention of spectacular fires in the past.

One of the earliest fires on record occurred in 1902. That story was taken from early files of The Cameron Herald for the history:

"On last Sunday while many of our people were still at church and others were warming at cozy fires preparing to retire for the night, the alarm of fire was given by whoops and the discharge of fire arms. Instantly church congregations dispersed, leaving the churches through the windows and doors, others left their homes and rushed wildly along the sidewalks."

The story told that the J. S. Hefley residence caught fire. Flames spread by a north wind onto a long row of sheds and dry frame houses used by John M. Hefley as warehouses.

"The fire caught under streams of water from buckets and swept on towards Belton street and on against the rear of the elegant row of brick iron-front buildings fronting on Depot street."

In 1920, the cotton compress burned for seven hours before it could be brought under control. That fire was called "one of the most stubborn."

Another was the 1925 cotton oil mill fire, when the whole city was threatened by a strong south wind blowing sparks into the business district. One church and several houses burned and other homes were saved by people getting on top of the roof with garden hoses and wetting down the roofs.

At this fire the Cameron volunteers had the help of Temple, Rosebud, and Rockdale fire departments.

Another disastrous fire occurred in 1939 at the Markham service station. Two men lost their lives and four others were seriously burned when spilled gasoline was ignited by a wood stove.

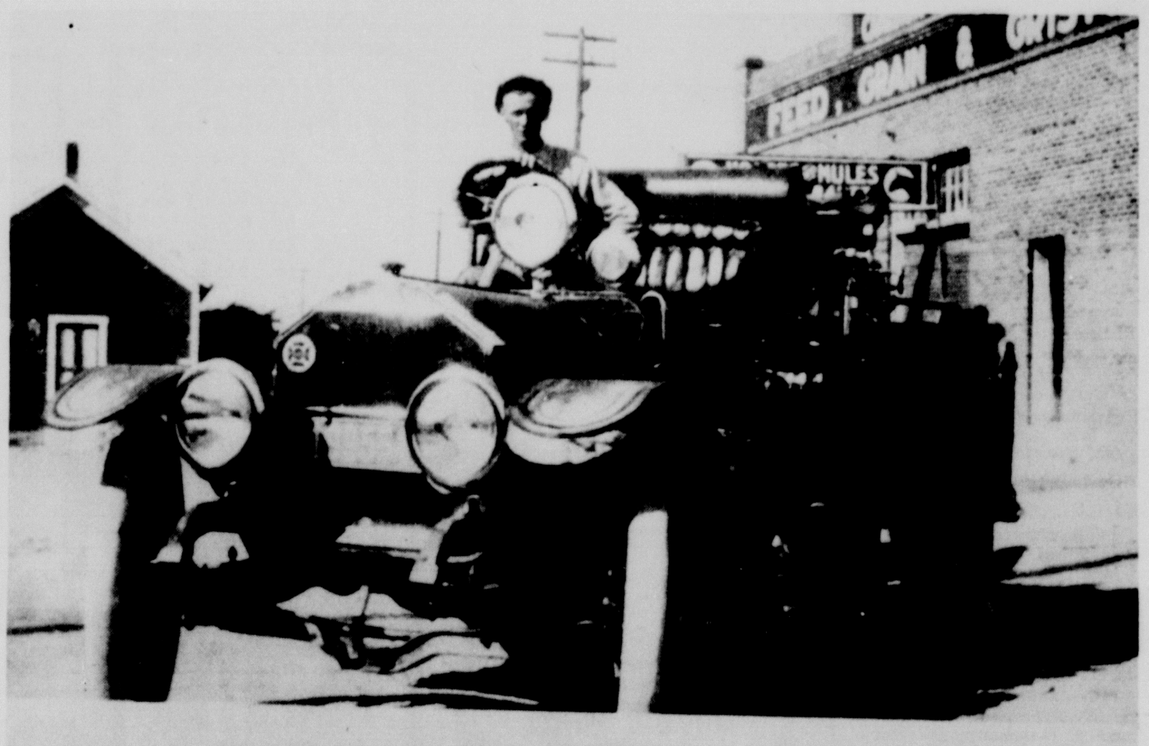
More recent disasters include the $45,000 blaze which destroyed five trucks and a trailer belonging to Jesse Kirk Jr. truckline.

Another was the $100,000 fire at the Texan Cafe and neighboring service station. This was started with the ignition of an Army truck at the station.

A three-alarmer completely gutted the Milam Theatre in downtown Cameron some years ago. Other stores in the block suffered considerable water and smoke damage.

A tragic event in 1966 was the death of Larry Burd, fire truck driver, after he was injured when the truck overturned. He was enroute to Rockdale's Alcoa Works where an explosion had started a fire.

One of the more spectacular fires occurred in 1970, when grain storage facilities at Milam Grain Co. burned in a six - alarmer. Trucks from Rosebud, Hearne and Rockdale aided Cameron volunteers in fighting the early morning fire.



FIRST FIRE TRUCK was this 1915 model, driven by August Horstmann. It was an American LaFrance chain-driven, solid tire model and could pump 500 gallons per minute.

Guides To Shopping

Consumers -- it's your responsibility, too. You as a consumer, can do much to help the marketplace be friendly and fair-dealing by following the guides of responsible shopping.

When you buy from an unethical or careless businessman, report the unsatisfactory service and poor merchandise to retailers and manufacturers. Most companies give personal attention to consumer complaints with a prompt, courteous reply. These complaints can help a company identify and correct mistakes.

Read informative labels, instruction booklets and guarantees to products, when they are provided by the manufacturers, before buying an item to learn its performance and care requirements.

After purchasing the product, keep the receipts, warranties and booklets. Then if you have to return an item or make a complaint, you will have an accurate record of purchase dates and prices, use and care instructions and model numbers.

Before making a complaint, think through the reasons why you are dissatisfied so that you can present your case well. Making an intelligent complaint requires courtesy and patience, plus accurate records.

Mark Twain's Story
OF THE
READING SPIDER

During Mark Twain's days as a newspaperman, he was editor of a small Missour newspaper.

One day he got a letter from a subscriber, stating that he had found a a spider in his newspaper and asked if this was an omen of good luck or bad luck.

Twain wrote: "Finding a spider in your newspaper is neither good luck nor bad. The spider was merely looking over our paper to see which merchant was not advertising so that he could go to that store, spin his web across the door and lead a life of undisturbed peace ever afterward."

You will find no spider webs across the doors of the merchants who advertise in your local paper.

MENTAL HEALTH MATTERS

Bertram S. Brown, M.D., Director
National Institute of Mental Health

Infant Individuality

Johnny cries a lot, won't eat regularly, sleeps infrequently, and is extremely active. Johnny's mother can't understand why and begins to think that she's a bad mother.

Bobby hardly ever cries, eats at regular intervals, sleeps most of the time, and plays contentedly when awake. His mother is proud of her good baby and thinks that she must be a great mother.

Both mothers are probably wrong, according to Dr. Arnold J. Sameroff of the University of Rochester, New York.

Dr. Sameroff is studying ways of measuring the personalities of newborn infants with the aid of a mental health research grant from HEW's National Institute of Mental Health. He is finding that infants have differing individualities even at birth.

This means, Dr. Sameroff says, that Johnny was probably just born that way; and if his mother realized this fact, it may help her to adjust and rear her child accordingly. The mother of Bobby is probably simply lucky that her child acts as he does.

In a psychological testing laboratory next to the nursery at the University hospital, Dr. Sameroff measures babies' temperaments by observing their activity, excitability, and sleeping and eating cycles. He thinks that prenatal influences may be related to temperament and notes that anxious mothers may have excitable babies.

This may result, he feels, from the fact that anxious mothers usually have a more difficult labor, which may have some influence in producing Johnny's excessive activity.

Dr. Sameroff is also trying to measure newborns' learning ability. He is finding that babies do not actually learn anything radically new in the first three days of life, but that they do become more efficient eaters, movers, and hearers.

In measuring adaptability, Dr. Sameroff has found that a child less than a day old can learn to suck at a certain rate in order to get the maximum amount of food and can remember a tone that he has heard before.

Through this and other research supported by the NIMH Center for Studies of Child and Family Mental Health, scientists are slowly but surely gathering information that can be tested and put to use for children so as to promote their mental health and prevent or ameliorate mental illness.
